Seller Tips

Whether you are new or experienced, we hope you find some of the following tips useful:

Just like Sellers, Customers come in many different varieties. You may run into a customer who is brisk and very specific about what they are looking for. If that happens, don't take it personally. Most times you will find that people are very nice. The less money people have available to spend, the more brisk or rude they can appear, or the more they may complain about pricing.

SELLER DO LIST:

- It is very helpful if you know the value of your items (emotional attachment aside) and what you will accept for each item, as well as, what you expect from the sale overall. Often, when Sellers become discouraged, it is because they may have an expectation that, for that time of year, season, etc. is too high. Knowing what you hope to accomplish can help you to enjoy the sale and have a great time selling.
- We recommend looking at the item from what you paid for it and try to avoid pricing on based on the emotional attachment. You also need to price based on how worn the item is. Brand new items with tags obviously will bring a higher price.
- The more your area is decorated, the more people will flock to your table to ask questions about your items or business. Have fun decorating your space. Vendors: remember that samples and giveaways are always a big hit with attendees!
- Have your items clean and neatly displayed on a rack or in short stacks on a table.
- Have your items priced either individually or collectively with a visible sign so that your customers are able to see them clearly.
- Sort your items by category, usually customers look for items by size, if clothing, or age, if toys, games, etc.
- Make sure your items are without odors or wrinkles and in good condition.

- Have your items displayed so that they can be easily seen. Often sellers have so much on the table that buyers can not see something that they might be interested in.
- As you sell your items, move new items into that area to keep your display fresh. Many times a mom may not have seen something at your table and as they walk by a second time it could catch their eye .
- It is important to acknowledge people when they are at your table, even with a "let me know if you need something or are looking for something in particular." Even a "Hi, how are you today?" can be a way to let potential customers know that they are important to you.
- If you have set up on Friday night, bring a table cover or sheet to drape over your table and any racks. Table coverings are not provided. It can be a good choice to bring a table covering.
- Use painter's tape or a tape that is easily removable from the tables to post signs.
- Allowing as much time as possible for your set up the evening before or the morning of will help you display your items in an organized fashion and sell more.
- Look over your items once you get to the sale to make sure that you do not have any stained items. Florescent lights can highlight stains on items that didn't appear to have stains in other lighting. Make sure that any stained items are placed in a bargain bin or clearly identified. One stained item on a table can deter buyers from looking further.
- For fire safety reasons, we do not allow items behind your table such as racks or large items. If you place items under your table, make sure they are easy to see.
- Candles are not allowed to be lit at this show.
- Small items and shoe pairs we recommend displaying in zippered baggies or tied together with zip ties, string, twine, or tags. It is helpful to have the size labeled on the tags or bag.
- If pieces are missing to a toy or game, this should be noted on that item clearly so that the buyer knows.
- Often moms come right from an ATM so it is important to bring lots of ones, some fives, and some coins. You may want to bring a test pen to check any large bills you receive for counterfeit. While it is rare that we have seen this, it has happened.
- Make sure to bring bags for your customer's purchases.
- If you are using a money box, you should make sure that the box is in a place where no one else can get in to it without you noticing. Many sellers find aprons like those you can get at a local hardware store work well to keep the money close at hand.
- If someone offers you a price lower than what you have marked, it is your choice to accept it. You do not have to sell an item to anyone.
- It is nice to have a helper available so that you can take a break, shop, or stretch a bit.
- Racks can easily be overloaded or if more than one customer is looking at your rack can be knocked off balance or even fall apart. It is important to secure and balance your rack with weight to keep this from happening. Some have found using small sand bags work (make sure that they do not leak) or a bin that has weight in it. Make sure to lock your wheels if you can so that the rack has more stability
- Most important tip -- Smile and enjoy your day!

Seller Tips: THINGS TO AVOID

- Talking on your cell phone when people are milling around your table. If you look disinterested, people may not be interested either and your sales will suffer.
- Sitting behind the table with your head down or staring at the floor, the wall, etc. This can keep buyers from asking questions or feel uncomfortable picking up an item they are interested in.
- Talking only to your helper/neighbor when customers are in front of your table. Sellers who seem preoccupied can often discourage potential customers from buying.
- While we would like theft to never happen, unfortunately sometimes it does. Make sure you have your purse either on your person or in a designated place where others can not get to it

LARGE ITEM AREA

- Anything larger than an 18 gallon tote, or does not fit under your table, needs to go into the Large Item Area.
- There is no fee for placing your item in the Large Item Area. When your item sells the cost is deducted from the sale as follows: Under $20=$1, $20 and up=$2.
- Each person selling in the large item area is required to fill out a Large Item Area Seller Form providing a detailed list of each large item, asking price, and lowest price upon checking item in at set-up.
- Large items MUST be checked into the large item area by 7:30am Saturday to allow time to organize the area
- Large Item Seller Checkouts are not available until 1:30pm. If any of your items have not sold, you can collect them from the Large Item Area when you check out.
- When placing an item in the large item area that has accessories, firmly secure the items to the large item so they can not be removed. This keeps children from playing with loose items and keeps those items from accidentally being placed with an item that they do not belong with.
- Large items need to be clean and MUST have working batteries.
- We reserve the right to refuse items not in good repair.
- Sellers must ensure all items meet Federal Safety Standards. For a list of recalls: <http://www.cpsc.gov/> No drop side cribs. Car seats must have at least two years left before they expire. If no expiration date is present the standard 6 year life span will be used to determine.
- You may pick up your money/unsold items at 1:30pm. Any items not claimed by 2:30pm will be donated.
- The large item area will be supervised at all times, however, organizers will not be held responsible for any lost, damaged, or stolen items.
